We are requesting approval for the addition of a new study on prosodic boundary cues in L1/L2 Mandarin Chinese speech to the protocol. This new study will examine the difference in prosodic boundary cues between L1 and L2 Mandarin speech. This study has pedagogical implications in that it can help account for and, accordingly, help eliminate, L2 learners’ foreign accent in their Mandarin production. The subjects participating in the experiment will watch a speechless movie Pear Story (Chafe, 1980: <http://pearstories.org/docu/maps.htm>) and then retell it. Their retelling will be recorded. The previously approved consent materials, including a taping release form, will be used to obtain informed consent. We are requesting approval for new instructions, new debriefing script and new recruitment scripts.
